

Current Options for Managing Pain and Addiction

October 27-28, 2017
Sheraton Cavalier, Saskatoon, SK

Conference Details

Description – Goal and Objectives

The urgency to manage pain and substance use disorders has never been more apparent. The recent rise in opioid related deaths and hospitalizations, and growing prevalence of complex pain in the population requires clinicians to develop new skills to effectively prevent and manage those with these challenging conditions.

The 2017 Current Options for Managing Pain and Addiction conference (COMPAC) will combine innovative education sessions with interprofessional networking opportunities to address complexities of care for people with acute, chronic, and recurrent pain, and/or substance use disorders. Plenary sessions will be led by regional and national experts on pain and addiction. Breakout sessions will be interactive, skills-based sessions led by clinicians and researchers from Saskatchewan. Interactive sessions will address the learning needs of both novice and advanced healthcare providers to further their knowledge and clinical skills in prevention, assessment, management, and communication.

The target audience is healthcare providers, including family physicians, physician specialists, medical residents, nurse practitioners, nurses, pharmacists, physical and occupational therapists, psychologists, dentists, and social workers.
